Hidden Valley of Lindsay Creek
Rich In Erin's Lore

By LEE SCHWARTZ

Fieldbrook was located in the upper end of Lindsay creek valley, some nine miles from Eureka. Its name is derived from a local river. Actually, it is a railroader community in a hidden valley whose beauty is like many other Humboldt scenes—beggars description.

Hidden Valley of Lindsay Creek
Rich In Erin's Lore

By LEE SCHWARTZ

Fieldbrook was located in the upper end of Lindsay creek valley, some nine miles from Eureka. Its name is derived from a local river. Actually, it is a railroader community in a hidden valley whose beauty is like many other Humboldt scenes—beggars description.

Fieldbrook was located in the upper end of Lindsay creek valley, some nine miles from Eureka. Its name is derived from a local river. Actually, it is a railroader community in a hidden valley whose beauty is like many other Humboldt scenes—beggars description.

Fieldbrook was located in the upper end of Lindsay creek valley, some nine miles from Eureka. Its name is derived from a local river. Actually, it is a railroader community in a hidden valley whose beauty is like many other Humboldt scenes—beggars description.

Fieldbrook was located in the upper end of Lindsay creek valley, some nine miles from Eureka. Its name is derived from a local river. Actually, it is a railroader community in a hidden valley whose beauty is like many other Humboldt scenes—beggars description.