Glendale-Cerro-Vista, Warren Creek--A Domain

By CHET SCHROEDER

June 18, 1939

Glendale and Esmeralda, together with Warren Creek valley, comprise that great sweep of the lower Mad river valley between 101 highway bridges and the town of Blue Lake. It is an area some five miles in length and two miles or more in width, and is located from ten to fifteen miles from Humboldt.

Glendale. Esmeralda, and Warren Creek, which mark the outer limits of the Humboldt-Warren area, are all in the lesser north of the Arcata peninsula. You can follow the old highway north of Mad river, as it winds up the storm's curve to Juno Point just above the new Mad river bridge. The railroad bridge has been purchased by the state and set aside as a preserve for those native wild flowers that are so much a part of Humboldt. At one time, it was the only highway over which the stage coach ran. Today, it is one of this region's beauty spots.

A pleasant view is obtained from the traveler as he goes up the hill, up the road, and over the hill, through the buildings, and down to the bottom of the valley. Mad river, with its mirror-like surface and its sparkling white rapids, is beautiful. The highway, which parallels the river, is just as lovely. The old railroad bridge, which crosses a small creek, is a beautiful sight.

Looking to the River.

First of all, let's see a view of Mad river from this old railroad bridge. The river here is about as wide as a small stream. The view is lovely, and it is a delightful sight. Further down the river, Mad river becomes a beautiful river. The river is wide, and the water is clear. The sky is blue. It is a lovely sight.

Ranches and Homes. Homes and ranches seem to dot the landscape. Some of the ranches are old, and others are new. The homes are well built. The ranches are large. The homes are beautiful.

Yard of Dr. L. S. Miner house, Glendale.

Frank Ricc (left), and George Hale in Bella Vista's new View Room.

Bella Vista has occupied commanding hilltop position.

Yard of Dr. L. S. Miner house, Glendale.

View overlooking Alford Airport ranch in Mad river valley, at Glendale.

PIONEER HARVEST.

Mr. and Mrs. Glassman, who have been married for 60 years, are the parents of 12 children. They are now living in the old glassman home on the west side of town. They have been living in Glendale for 50 years.

The Glassmans are busy harvesting their crops. They have a large garden and a small orchard. They also have a small farm. They are busy harvesting their vegetables and fruits.

Warren creek schoolhouse is on vacation.

Nels and Carl Johnson are building present day house at Gettysburg ranch, Esmeralda.

John von invaded this sturdy old house to be his house in spring of 1800's.

About 40 years ago, the M. S. and Mrs. Robinson ranch covered the old Warren creek school. It was a small school, and it was built on the site of the old schoolhouse. The schoolhouse was built in 1880. It was a small, two-room schoolhouse. The schoolhouse was built on the site of the old schoolhouse. It was a small schoolhouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are now living in the old Robinson homestead. They are busy harvesting their crops. They have a large garden and a small orchard. They also have a small farm. They are busy harvesting their vegetables and fruits.

The Glassmans are busy harvesting their crops. They have a large garden and a small orchard. They also have a small farm. They are busy harvesting their vegetables and fruits.

The Glassmans are busy harvesting their crops. They have a large garden and a small orchard. They also have a small farm. They are busy harvesting their vegetables and fruits.