Holmes And Larabee--Live And Let Live

COMMUNITY, RANCH AND RIVER BLEND INTO IDELLIC SETTING

by CHEF SCHWABORFF

Holmes is an attractive rural community located upon a fertile shelf of land adjoining the Eel River, some forty miles south of Eureka. Highway 101 bounds it on one side, and does not pass through it. As a result, the village's first impression is of a peaceful world-worthy and rural. And the more you travel through the community, the more it impresses you.

The Holmes "Parkers" pretty house beside Eel river.

the farther you go, the more you love it. The "P. L. knows how to build homes.

Together, Holmes and Larabee are the twin lakes of the Redwood Coast's high plateaus. And high plateaus of the Eel River run true as a rule along the coast, with the exception of a few that run through the community. Holmes, on the other hand, stands all stands of natural redwoods, pine, and part of the Eel River's forest.

Holmes has an old post office stand.

And over the valley pastures there is the classic little thatched roof, white siding, and wooden steps, a reminder of the early log cabins. Holmes is built along the same lines, with the exception of the newer, larger houses.

The quaint Georgianna school in Larabee.

Cute elk keeps a wary eye on photographer.

Jack and Gene McCarthy building new home.

Part of the Larabee Ranch's well-built facilities.

FOREST AND RIVER BLEND INTO IDELLIC SETTING

by CHEF SCHWABORFF

Holmes is a community that blends into the hills, with the Eel River running through it. The community's riverfront property is about a mile wide, with about 30 acres of land, and the riverfront property is about a mile wide, with a dock and a boat launch. Holmes has a community center, a fire station, and a post office.

The view from the Larabee Ranch is the perfect setting for a weekend getaway.

The river flows through Holmes, and the community is built along its banks. The community is surrounded by forest, with the Eel River running through it. Homes and businesses are built along the river, with the exception of a few that run through the community.

The Holmes waterfront home.

The community is built along the river, with the exception of a few that run through the community. Homes and businesses are built along the river, with the exception of a few that run through the community.

(Continued on Page 17)

(Continued on Page 18)