Loleta—Self-Sufficient Dairy Town

Famed For Fishing And Milk Products

By CHEY SCHWARTZKOPF

PLATOON DEY REYN

Twelve miles south of Eureka, where Highway 101 drops from Table Bluff hills to Eel river valley, stands the town of Loleta. One of the first impressions the visitor gets on Loleta is that it is a community sufficiently auto-sufficient. It even has a total business street is not located on the highway—a total town of about 2000 people. It is the old coast highway that formerly crossed the old boundary of the town.

Loleta’s Railroad Avenue, where most of its businesses are located, parallels the Northwestern Pacific Railroad. That, together with the depot in the center of town, and the Golden State Creamery plant, gives an impression of a town that is rather railroad, rather than the type of town that is popularly considered an anti-transportation town.

Long time of growth

Let’s drop into the Bank of Loleta and meet Robert Atchison, who founded the bank in 1875, and has been its president ever since. Again you get that impression of self-sufficiency, but it has been an independent one, and has held in its own time of its ways for a town. Atchison says it is a fact that Loleta has been a prosperous town through the years, and that it is still the town of “the town,” and that it is still a type of town—of men who know everyone by their first name, and whose families believe in them. There is an air of kindness about the men.

Loleta has a population of some 2000 people. The town is on the main line of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad, and is at the junction of the two main lines running through the town. The town is also a center for the surrounding country, and is a fine place for a town to live in.

The Golden State Creamery

The Golden State Creamery is located in the center of town, and is a fine creamery for the surrounding country. It is a modern creamery, and is supplied with the latest equipment. The creamery is operated by a local family, and is one of the best creameries in the county.

The Senior Citizen

Loleta’s oldest living citizen is a man who has lived in Loleta all his life. He is known by everyone in town, and is a fine, kind man. His name is Frank Webster, and he has lived in Loleta all his life. He is a fine, kind man, and is known by everyone in town.

A few miles away is the town of Loleta, which is a fine place to live in. It is a town of about 2000 people, and is a fine place for a town to live in.

The Pendant Family

The Pendant Family is a fine family, and is known by everyone in town. They are a fine family, and are known by everyone in town.

A street of Loleta’s up-to-date modern homes.

Where Highway 101 pauses by Loleta, showing match.

Highway 101 underpass where railroad crosses in Loleta.

P percentile view on hillside in back of Loleta, showing town, Eel river valley, and river in distance.

Downtown Loleta

With its hilly setting, fine views, beautiful older homes and attractive newer residences, its historic appearing business blocks and up-to-date cigar industry, Loleta presents both a rich past and a glorious present. There are two fine schools, a modern hospital, and various other buildings on its two blocks of main thoroughfare. And there’s the drug store, formerly operated by Mrs. Elephant’s popular Jim Pemberton, who sold it a year ago to S. H. Pemberton.

Pioneer Family

The Pendant family owns the oldest house in town. It was built in 1876, and is a fine, old house. The Pendant family has lived in it for many years, and is a fine family.

The Pendant family owns the oldest house in town. It was built in 1876, and is a fine, old house. The Pendant family has lived in it for many years, and is a fine family.

The Pendant family owns the oldest house in town. It was built in 1876, and is a fine, old house. The Pendant family has lived in it for many years, and is a fine family.

The Pendant family owns the oldest house in town. It was built in 1876, and is a fine, old house. The Pendant family has lived in it for many years, and is a fine family.

The Pendant family owns the oldest house in town. It was built in 1876, and is a fine, old house. The Pendant family has lived in it for many years, and is a fine family.