For more than 25 years, indigenous Albuquerque artist Lonnie Anderson has been performing inspirational acts of art and creativity on Valentine's Day for his wife, Anne. Anderson, affectionately dubbed "The King of Valentine's Day" by news outlets, showcased some of his creations during LOVE: Valentine Art, an exhibition at the South Broadway Cultural Center earlier this year. The film was featured in the 46th American Indian Film Festival and Lonnie will be guest lecturing on personal experience of overcoming struggle and his work through art and healing with currently and formerly incarcerated youth and individuals.
